

NEWS BRIEFS

Kunsan City town patrol
Effective today, the base town patrol begins patrolling Kunsan City in partnership with the Korean National Police. Military members at Kunsan violating curfew or the wingman policy are subject to penalty under the Uniformed Code of Military Justice.

Travel advisory
Due to a scheduled protest from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Songtan Shopping Mall area adjacent to the Osan Main Gate, Kunsan members are advised to take extreme caution and avoid the area if possible.

Chapel Christmas special
The base chapel invites all Kunsan members to celebrate the Advent season with a presentation of the musical performance, Lessons and Carols, Sunday. For more information, call the chapel at 782-4300.

Course 12 testing update
Students who fail a subcourse examination may re-test once on that subcourse after a 30-day remediation and waiting period. The earliest date an individual can re-take a course 12 exam is on the 31st calendar day following the day on which the initial test was given. Effective Jan. 1, 2006, students failing a course 12 exam can re-test in three days.

MSS minimal manning
The 8th Mission Support Squadron is minimally manned Wednesday due to visiting Pacific Air Forces Col. Ken James. Col. James is briefing the squadron and all base personnel about future personnel changes, including virtual Military Personnel Flight access. The briefing is from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Loring Club. All are welcome to attend.

A-Cubed volunteers needed
The A-Cubed volunteer organization needs additional volunteers to help assist Airmen. For those interested in signing up or having their squadron sponsor a night should contact Master Sgt. Andrew Denham at 728-5380 or e-mail A-Cubed at 8fw.acubed@kunsan.af.mil.

Happy holidays Celebrating our families

By Gen. Paul Hester
Pacific Air Forces commander

As we enter the holiday season, I want to thank each member of our Pacific Air Forces family - service member, spouse, son or daughter - for the outstanding year you have made in 2005.

Every one of you has contributed to a very busy year and has well earned the respect of our great nation.

Once again, Airmen of the Pacific have played a vital role in maintaining peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region.

In an ever-changing world, we find demands placed upon us that require sacrifice. This past year, we have seen Airmen from the PACAF deploy to just about every corner of the world for a variety of missions.

With these challenges, I've found that, even though our Air Force family is a great source of strength, our greatest strength comes from the family at home.

Whether it's your spouse, children or your parents, they follow your every move with deep compassion, love and support, while at the same time keeping the home fires burning so you may concentrate on your duty.

Let us honor our loved ones at home this holiday season that extends from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day.

Whether you're deployed or enjoying the comforts of home, remember to show your love and appreciation for your biggest fans.

Let us also remember, we face unique risks to our safety, both on- and off-duty. Ensuring we accomplish our missions and enjoy our off-duty activities safely is yet another way we show our appreciation and love to the people we hold most dear in our lives.

To all members of Team PACAF, Lynda and I wish you and your families a blessed and safe holiday season.

May God continue to guide and guard you and may 2006 bring you and those you love joy, peace and happiness.

Merry Christmas!

At the core - Air Force core values matter

By Chief Master Sgt. Rodney McKinley
Pacific Air Forces command chief

The core is the center, the very foundation, the inmost and most intimate part of a thing. The core is the heart of the matter.

When we joined the U.S. Air Force, we became part of a unique culture. Its foundation is our core values and central to all we do and all we are: integrity first, service before self and excellence in all things. Our Air Force culture and these core values give us a design not only for duty but for our whole lives.

The core values apply everywhere, all the time. As Airmen in the world's greatest air and space force, we represent the Air Force. We are Airmen whether we're at our home station or deployed on a temporary duty assignment.

The old notion that "what goes TDY, stays TDY" is simply that: a useless, outdated notion. It has no place in today's Air Force. The senior leaders of the U.S. and the Air Force across the board work hard to establish and maintain cordial relationships with our allies around the world. As guests in those countries where we are TDY, we must be aware that our behavior can affect our relationships with the people of those countries - for better or worse.

When we were kids, our parents always cautioned us to "be on our best behavior" when we were guests anywhere. We're adults now, responsible for our own behavior. And if we follow the core values, we are always on our best behavior.

Most Airmen live the core values on a daily basis. But it only takes a few - choosing to ignore those principles - to damage the public perception of the U.S. Air Force and possibly even the United States. Whether we are TDY to Texas, Turkey, India or Iraq, we are the U.S. Air Force.

When you're TDY, your performance off duty is as important as your performance on duty. Your actions while TDY can affect your squadron, your wing, your major command and the U.S. Air Force as a whole - in addition to your family and your career.

If you still have the perception that you can relax your moral standards when you are TDY, you need to take a good, hard look at yourself. The Air Force has no room for you on its team.

Team members look out for each other. Airmen take care of Airmen. It's the wingman concept - the confidence that we are not flying alone. Someone else is looking out for us to keep us on track and out of trouble.

The wingman concept stretches from top to bottom - it means commanders and supervisors at all levels being fully engaged with their Airmen, not only at home but at TDY locations as well. It means setting the right example, whether you're a basic airman or a general. You have a responsibility, not only to yourself but to your co-workers and the U.S. Air Force, to be a good wingman.

Let me re-emphasize most of our Airmen already take the core values to heart. Integrity, service and excellence are simply part of their daily lives - at the core of who they are.

But when even one of our Airmen misbehaves while TDY, it can impact the public perception of the entire Air Force.

We can't afford to let that happen. Ever. When you're TDY in an unfamiliar place, take a buddy with you when you're going out. Be aware of yourself and look out for each other.

Be a good Airman and you will be a good wingman too. And that's the heart of the matter.

Old man winter brings snow, safety concerns to Kunsan

By Airman 1st Class
Stephen Collier
8th Fighter Wing public affairs

The weatherman got it right this past weekend as snow blanketed Kunsan from Saturday evening into Monday morning.

Final estimates showed that eight inches fell on the base, making for friendly snowball fights as well as hazardous driving conditions. Master Sgt. Richard Hollingsworth, 8th Operations Support Squadron weather flight operations chief, said the base could expect more snow throughout the coming week.

"Kunsan is forecasted to have on and off snow showers ... with moderate snowfall until Friday," Sgt. Hollingsworth said. "Climatology has shown that the amount of snowfall can vary year to year. In 2004, Kunsan only received 17.9 inches of snow while 2003 saw more than 40 inches."

Other installations throughout the Republic of Korea reported snowfall as well, including Osan Air Base, which received two inches of snow. Yongsan Garrison recorded three inches while Camp Humphreys saw two inches over the weekend.

While the snowfall can be enjoyable, being extra safe is just as important as making those snow angels. Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Graham, 8th Fighter Wing safety office NCO in charge of inspections, encouraged Wolf Pack members to take extra care as the winter season begins to hit the Korean peninsula.

"Kunsan members can do a lot to avoid mishaps this winter, to include slowing down while driving and walking around the base," Sgt. Graham said. "Also, be prepared for changing weather and road conditions as well as staying aware of your surroundings."

Other accidents that commonly occur during the winter season are slips, trips and falls on icy surfaces. Vehicle accidents are also common. During the past weekend, several Kunsan government-owned vehicles were involved in accidents that were directly related to the snow and road conditions, Sgt. Graham said.

ROTC friendship dinner

By 1st Lt. Brooke Brander
Wolf Pack public affairs

Friendship was the theme Tuesday night at the Ritz-Plaza Hotel in Kunsan City for about 60 Wolf Pack members.

The Kunsan City Reserve Officer Training Corps Association of Retired Officers hosted the ROTC Friendship Dinner and had about 60 retired Korean officers and family members in attendance.

Col. Brian Bishop, 8th Fighter Wing commander, was among the roughly 60 Wolf Pack members that attended the event.

Opening remarks were made by both Col. Bishop and Mr. Cho, Yong Rae, Kunsan City ROTC chairman and highlighted the continued friendship and cooperation between the Republic of Korea and the United States.

"The biggest benefit of the evening was for the CGOs," said Col. Linda Urrutia-Vathall, 8th Mission Support Group commander. "The opportunity for them to go out into the community in their blues and portray the Air Force at its best was awesome. As senior leaders we do this all the time and it great for the CGOs to have had this opportunity."

The friendship dinner was filled with games and a smorgasbord of Korean and American dishes.

"I enjoyed all the Korean games," said 1st Lt. Wallace Collins, 8th Services Squadron. "I felt like I was on one of those Asian games shows."

Hospitality was far from in short supply with Mr. Cho and Col. Bishop making sure every glass was always full, with Mr. Cho filling Wolf Pack glasses and Col. Bishop filling ROTC glasses.

"The members of the Kunsan ROTC association were gracious hosts and I took away the knowledge of how grateful the Korean citizens are to us for helping to defend the Korean Peninsula," said 2nd Lt. Lisa Schein, 8th Communications Squadron.

PRIDE OF THE PACK

Master Sgt. Raymond Clinger

Unit: 8th Fighter Wing

Duties: Fighter wing plans and programs

Hometown: San Antonio

Follow-on: Charleston AFB, S.C.

Hobbies: Playing guitar and camping

Favorite music: Jimmy Buffet

Last good movie: "Star Wars III: Revenge of the Sith"

Best thing you've done here: "Traveling around Korea and doing some sight seeing"

"As the wing's focal point for inspections, we've made tremendous headway to meet the wing's goals due to Sgt. Clinger's 'go-get-em' work ethic. He was hand-selected to help build this shop from the ground up to a robust well-oiled machine ready to lead the charge for Kunsan's attainment of an "Outstanding" rating in the upcoming UCI. Coming from the Maintenance career field, Sgt. Clinger quickly transitioned to the Plans world, utilizing his 19 years of experience to facilitate the seamless development of a multi-functional staff agency. Finally, Sgt. Clinger completed all his primary duties while efficiently managing the equipment account, as well as, our munitions account, tallying more than 2,000 pieces of munitions with zero discrepancies during recent inspection.

Music stokes Kunsan holiday season

By Staff Sgt. Erien Clark-Chasse
Wolf Pack public affairs

Holiday cheer is in full season, snow is on the ground, the wing’s holiday tree is on and the Wolf Pack had its first carolers tour base Monday.

The Pacific Saxophones from The Air Force Band of the Pacific – Asia at Yokota Air Base, Japan, spent Monday traveling from section to section playing music and spreading a little holiday cheer.

“Every time we come to Kunsan, we are struck by how cold the weather is and how warm the people are,” said Staff Sgt. James Butler, the trio’s alto saxophone player.

The three-man band made 12 stops Monday and played about eight songs at each stop.

“It was nice to have them come to us in our shop. Sometimes we miss out on these types of things because of work, and I appreciated their willingness to put up with the cold in our building,” said Staff Sgt. Brian Gaylor, 8th Maintenance Squadron. “We loved having them play.”

At the last minute, the band made time to play at the wing holiday tree lighting Monday evening.

“It was nice to have them here; just neat all around,” said Master Sgt. John Walker, 8th Mission Support Squadron.

The band plans to play more than 40 shows during their 10-day stay on the Korean peninsula.

The mission of Air Force bands is to support the global Air Force mission in war and peace by fostering national heritage and providing professional musical products and services for official military, recruiting and community relations events.

They provide military and patriotic music for official military and government activities. They also provide an essential element in maintaining troop morale, retention and recruiting efforts, according to their mission statement.

“We like to get in as many shows as we can, it means a lot to us that we can bring a little joy to people here,” said Sgt. Butler.

Their last show for Kunsan was the ROTC friendship dinner Tuesday night before they headed to Osan Air Base.

“Every time we come to Kunsan, we are struck by how cold the weather is and how warm the people are.”

— Staff Sgt. James Bulter
Alto saxophone player

At least once a year, some part of the larger band takes the chance to visit the peninsula.

The larger band breakdown into seven types of smaller bands used to maximize their visits. The Pacific Saxophones are one of these pieces.

The three members of the band each play a different type of saxophone. Senior Airman Micheal Ladd plays the baritone and Senior Airman Joe Wagner play the tenor to round out Sgt. Butler’s Alto.

Bands and the military have a long history together and bands started from a very humble beginning to worldwide status.

The 14 members of the first known “Air Force” band set foot on French soil in September 1917, carrying instruments purchased from their lieutenant’s personal funds.

The commander of the 36th Aeronautics Squadron, to which they were assigned, was so impressed with his musicians that he petitioned the American Red Cross in Paris to help find more instruments and increased the band’s size.

Bands have come a long way since then. Throughout World War II, the bands of the Army Air Corps contributed significantly in supporting the morale of our troops.

When the Air Force became a separate service in 1947, Air Corps bands also transferred to the young Air Force.

Since then, bands have continued to inspire esprit de corps in Airmen, patriotism in U.S. citizenry and admiration and respect from people of all nations, according to the band’s fact sheet.

For more information about the bands that visited Kunsan or bands available to visit, check out their Web site at: <http://www.yokota.af.mil/BaseUnits/Orgs/Tenants/Band/>.

Senior Airman Michael Ladd, baritone player, Staff Sgt. James Butler, alto player and Senior Airman Joe Wagner, tenor player, entertain Wolf Pack members in the base exchange food court Monday as part of their visit to base.

Cultural Corner

Did you know?

Masks are called tal in Korean, but they are also known by many other names such as gamyeon, gwangdae, chorani, talbak and talbagaji. Korean masks come with black cloth attached to the sides of the mask designed to cover the back of the head and also to simulate black hair.

Masks and mask dances developed in Korea as early as the Prehistoric age. The masks fall into two categories: religious masks and artistic masks. Some masks were enshrined in shaman shrines and revered with periodical offering rites.

Other religious masks were used to expel evil spirits, like Bangsangsi, which until recently, were seen at the forefront of a funeral procession to ward off evil spirits.

Artistic masks were mostly used in dance and drama.

Most of the masks depict human faces but some represent deities, and there are also masks of animals, real and imagined.

An interesting feature is that the masks of yangban, the upper class gentlemen, are almost always deformed in one way or another, sometimes with harelips, a lopsided mouth, a distorted nose or squint eyes — a reflection of the commoners’ hostility toward the privileged class.

Mask dance-dramas are basically a folk art naturally developed among the common people of Joseon society (1392-1910). They vary slightly according to region and performer but they all share fundamental characteristics. They are based on a sense of rebellion felt by the common people toward the reality of their lives.

Their basic themes are exorcism rites, ritual dances or biting satire and parody of human weaknesses, social evils and privileged class. Like the folk literature of the time, it appeals to its audiences by ridiculing apostate Buddhist monks, decadent noblemen and shamans. The conflict between an ugly wife and a seductive concubine is another popular theme.

The most remarkable feature of Korean mask dance-drama is the enthusiastic participation of the audience. Toward the end of a performance there is little distinction between the actors and the audience as they join together in robust dance and bring it to a finale.

In Korean mask dance-drama, the common people could vent their frustrations through comic dramatization and enliven their lives with a collective dramatic experience.

MAIL CALL!

Post office helps bring holiday cheer to Kunsan

By Airman 1st Class
Stephen Collier
Wolf Pack public affairs

It's the time of year when presents bring joy to children across the world.

It's also the time when letters from loved ones put smiles on the faces of Wolf Pack members as Kunsan draws closer to the holiday season.

The Kunsan post office continues working overtime to bring these letters, not to mention packages, containing anything from home-made brownies to new sets of golf clubs to the men and women of the Wolf Pack.

To serve all their customers, there are a few things people here can do to ease the post office's burden of shipping and receiving packages for the holidays, according to Carlton Cornelius, 8th Communications Squadron postmaster.

"There is a lot of mail coming into the post office, so we need our customers to come in and pick up their mail on time," Mr. Cornelius said. "We know some people like us to hold their mail until the last moment, but we just don't have the storage space. Come pick up your mail ... we would be glad to give it to you."

Together with packages overflowing in the small facility located next to the Falcon Community Center, critical dates for sending items back to the United States in time to put them under that tree are right around the corner.

"The time has already come and gone to send 'snail' mail back to the States in time for the holidays," he said. "The cut off for priority and first-class mail is Saturday while express mail is Dec. 19. Please have your mail into the post office so we can make sure it gets back to the States on time."

Staff Sgt. Christy Kinley, 8th CS finance official at the post office, said it's important for customers to itemize their packages before sending them home.

"Watch out for fake items going back to the States," she said. "Customers should itemize their packages so they can get to their destination faster."

Mr. Cornelius added that loved ones sending those morale packages to Kunsan should be aware of what they were wrapping.

"As far as sending items, please ask them not to send alcohol," the postmaster said. "People sometimes want to send liquor and beer, but both are a no-no. Not only can they break, but the liquid can be seen as a possible terrorist package."

Other items prohibited from being mailed include explosives, combustible liquids (such as lighter fluid), prescription drugs

Deadlines to make it by Christmas Day:

+ Saturday for priority mail

+ Dec. 19 for express mail

Quick tips

+ Watch out for fake or imitation items being sent home, they might get held by customs.

+ Do not send explosives, combustible liquids (such as lighter fluid), alcohol, prescription drugs and reptiles.

+ Check mailbox daily Those with questions should call the post office at 782-5514.

Maintainers battle it out

The 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron Cobras and the 8th Maintenance Squadron Dragons went head-to-head Nov. 30 for leading maintenance teams.

The Cobras started off strong with a huge momentum that made way for back-to-back jumpers, putting them ahead on the board.

Cobras point guard Greg Majors added to the score with pin-point free throws, helping to maintain a tight lead with free throws.

“The momentum for us changed as we went into halftime,” Coach Otis Booker said. “The Dragons had us in the middle and on the boards.”

“It was challenging in the beginning,” Dragon’s Coach Dixon said. “In the first half, they exploited our zone by hitting the majority of their outside shots. We saw their style and adapted to it.”

After halftime, the Dragons came out with a fierce offensive drive and never looked back.

“We just got behind,” Coach Booker said. “We couldn’t get back into the game.”

NATIONAL LEAGUE COVERAGE

Pantons shoot down Loggies for 43-24 win

Like shooting down enemy aircraft, the pilots of the 35th Fighter Squadron, or Pantons, came out fighting to defeat the 8th Logistics Readiness Squadron Team Two 43-24.

Used to flying supersonic, the Loggies slowed the pace of the game to keep the score tight. Both teams went into halftime at 12-7.

“The turning point was at halftime when Herschy Schwerdt gave a motivational speech about how it was time to lace the sneak up and bring the ‘A’ game,” said Coach David Still.

Coach Still was right because the Pantons’ defense came out strong with players Nojo Riggs and a tough “this is my house” attitude of Catfish Falco help to keep the Loggies at bay to allow for a lead.

The Pantons continued to press, taking the win 43-24.

The Pantons are scheduled to play the 8th Communications Squadron at 6 p.m. Thursday.

Navy takes down Army 42-23

Adam Ballard rushed for 192 yards and two touchdowns on 18 carries to lead the Navy Midshipmen to a 42-23 rout of the Army Black Knights in the storied annual rivalry of service academies.

Navy (7-4) claimed the Commander-in-Chief’s Trophy with a dominant performance from Lincoln Financial Field.

Quarterback Lamar Owens rushed for another 99 yards and three scores as the Midshipmen racked up 490 yards on the ground.

Army (4-7) was paced by Zac Dahman, who completed 23-of-35 passes for 255 yards and three touchdowns. Jeremy Trimble was his favorite target with six catches for 81 yards and two scores, while Carlton Jones provided 80 rushing yards on 22 carries.

The Black Knights opened the scoring with a 32-yard field goal from Justin Koenig at the end of the first quarter, but the second stanza belonged to Navy.

Barely a minute into the frame, Reggie Campbell broke loose on a 54-yard touchdown run to give the Midshipmen a 7-3 edge. Army reclaimed the lead on a 30-yard scoring strike from Dahman to Trimble, but Navy responded with two straight touchdown runs from Owens.

Navy finished with 531 total yards on the day, needing only 41 yards from Owens on 3-of-5 passing. Army compiled 337 yards, with just 82 coming on the ground.

"INTO THE BLUE"
Rating: PG-13 for action violence, drug material, sexual content and language
Staring: Paul Walker and Jessica Alba
Synopsis: When four young divers discover a legendary shipwreck rumored to contain millions in gold at the bottom of the sea, they believe their dream of buried treasure has come true. But nearby on the ocean floor, a sunken plane full of illegal cargo threatens their find. The friends make a pact to keep quiet about both discoveries so they can excavate the shipwreck before a rival treasure hunter uncovers their secret and beats them to the gold. But their plan goes awry when they realize dangerous smugglers are already closing in on the missing plane, and one of the friends makes a fatal decision that quickly turns the treasure hunters into the hunted.
